FOREWORD

I WAS fortunate to receive a volunteer offer from my friend, Mr Herbert M. Vaughan, to arrange, catalogue, and describe my collection of Welsh Book-Plates. His knowledge of the subject, especially in regard to its Welsh application, is, I think, unrivalled.

The collection, which contains about fourteen hundred examples, is the result of a very desultory desire, recurring at intervals during the last fifteen years, to bring together as many book-plates as possible having some Welsh connection.

The desire never developed into a hobby, and was only pursued as chance occasion offered, and as a side issue of a more serious attempt at book collecting, a pastime more dangerous and insidious both to the pocket and the temper.

I did not realise that I had unconsciously succeeded in forming a not unimportant collection until Mr Vaughan one day descended on my library and spied the land. I gratefully accepted his aid; he has attached a value to the collection which it would not otherwise possess, and has further increased that value by adding many rare plates from his own collection.

One hundred and fifty copies only of this Catalogue have been printed for private circulation and the type has been dispersed; 50 copies on hand-made paper numbered 1 to 50, and 100 copies on ordinary paper numbered 51 to 150. I have sent a presentation copy to each of the following institutions, with the hope that the valuable information compiled by Mr Vaughan may be of interest and service in the realms of Genealogy and Topography to future as well as present generations, especially amongst the many families in our self-governing Dominions and the United States who are of Welsh origin:—

INTRODUCTION

IN November, 1918, I received the whole of the collection of the Welsh book-plates that had been formed during several years by Sir Evan Davies Jones, Bart., M.P. To this I have myself added about fifty plates from my own collection.

A word of explanation is here required as to the term "Welsh," for it covers not only the book-plates of persons residing in Wales or the Marches, but also people having connection with Welsh life, as well as families of Welsh descent living in England and Ireland and even oversea. I have had to use my personal judgment in the matter of inclusion and exclusion of "Welsh" book-plates, and my attitude has been that of including rather than excluding those with doubtful claims. Consequently, this collection must contain some specimens that have small right to be accounted Welsh; yet I think on the whole my method is a sound one. In most cases I have been largely guided by the heraldic bearings—the vast majority of book-plates are armorial in character—rather than by the surname or domicile.

For those who have never studied any work dealing with the history and evolution of the book-plate, I may state that the book-plate or book-label or ex-libris—call it which you please—came into vogue very shortly after the invention of printing in the middle of the fifteenth century, the early Igler and Pirkheimer plates being well known to collectors. Gradually it became popular on the Continent, and was common there long before its use extended to England. Only three English plates, all Elizabethan (those of Sir Nicholas Bacon, Sir Thomas Tresham and Joseph Holland) are known to have been produced in the sixteenth century. Slowly the book-plate increased in popularity during the seventeenth century, which saw the fine plates of Sir Edward Littleton, Sir Thomas Gore, Samuel Pepys and a few others; but it was not till the year 1698 that the book-plate became fashionable. From that year, however, till the present day the custom of having a label of ownership pasted into the books both in public and private libraries has continued unbroken.

From an artistic point of view, the book-plate since 1698 has gone through a succession of phases. First, there is the early “Jacobean” (so-called) design, with a square shield surrounded by mantling of acanthus foliage. These early Jacobean plates are usually dated, and in most cases seem to have belonged only to persons of high degree. In this collection the fine armorial plates of Sir John Aubrey and Gwyn of Llansannon are admirable specimens of this early type, while of slightly later date are the plates of Sir Thomas Hanmer, Baron Robert Price and Sir Thomas Trevor.

From the simple design of plain shield and mantling the book-plate during the reigns of Anne and George I. began to grow more elaborate. Of this later Jacobean style we have good examples in the John Wogan of Wiston, the Lady Lloyd, and the gorgeous plate of Henrietta-Louisa Fermor, Countess of Pomfret (née Jeffreys of Acton), which is one of the largest and finest plates ever engraved.

About 1730 the "Jacobean" gradually began to merge into the Rococo, or Louis XV., or "Chippendale," a leading characteristic of which is the shape of the shield, that now becomes curved and often lop-sided. The more formal later Jacobean embellishments now give place to a riot of flourishes and foliage, often without symmetry. The large Thomas Pryse (of Gogerddan) is one of the finest specimens of this phase; but G. Davies, Harwich, John Myddleton, John Hughes of Brecon and dozens of others all offer good examples of this class.

It may be added here that both in the later Jacobean and the Chippendale plates a large amount of extraneous ornament is often used. Cherubs, "sisters allegoric," globes, books, urns, musical instruments, curtains, mantles are introduced with good effect, and in such cases the plate is usually styled "Pictorial." In fact, the "Book-Pile" design becomes in course of time a regular feature, and is often so designated. The plate of Will. Worthington is a good example of this style of decoration. The "Mantle" too is frequently used as a background to the shield, as in the plates of David Lloyd and Richard Mostyn of Penbedw. Naval and military trophies are also found (cp. the plate of Adam Rogers).

After the "Chippendale" comes the "Festoon" or Louis XVI. period, beginning, roughly, about 1775. Here the shield regains its symmetry but becomes spade-shaped, and the swags of roses or fruit, the chains of corn-husks, the elegant pins, all own a regular value in the scheme of ornament. Sometimes the shield is enclosed in an ornamental oval and forms a medallion, as in Sir William Jones.

About 1790 the heavy wreaths and loops and light chains are discarded, only scroll- or ribbon-work and a few sprigs of foliage or a pair of palm branches being left. Even these ornaments, called the "Wreath and Ribbon," soon disappear, and we have the plain spade shield, which marks the opening years of the nineteenth century.

About 1810 the shield loses its spade form, and becomes first square and plain, and then a little later appears with pointed ears. From 1830 or thereabouts the average book-plate degenerates into a mere "die-sinker," generally consisting of a slightly curved shield with a mass of shaded mantling above.

About 1870, however, taste began to improve, and the Eclectic School arose. The elaborate armorial designs of C. W. Sherborn, the portrait plates of Stacey Marks, the choice designs of Batchelor, Kite, Eve, Kate Greenaway and numerous other artists of the late Victorian era are frequently found. There are several excellent examples of this modern school included in this collection, of special notice among them being the plates of Lord Kenyon, Dr J. L. Propert, Harry Arthur James, Sir John Rhys, Muriel Rogers, etc.

Mention should also be made of the "Landscape" Plates, which curiously enough reached their highest point of excellence in the first quarter of the nineteenth century. Some of these were designed by Bewick, Sherwin, or their pupils, and are of great beauty. In this connection the pretty little plate of Thomas Evans, M.D., should be noted for its view of Henllan on the Teifi.

The bulk of these book-plates are, of course, "Armoial," but there are also a fair number of plain labels. These are often of special interest, seeing that they usually belonged to schoolmasters, clergymen, poets, authors and other literary persons. To my mind the most interesting specimen of this class to be found in this collection is the T. S. Evans, Mathematical Master at Christ's Hospital, which is formed out of the 47th Theorem of the first book of Euclid. Leather-gilt labels, too, are not uncommon in the early nineteenth century.

A fair number of plates bear the name or initials of the engraver, and a smaller number show a date. I have noted these signatures and dates in my catalogue, and in a few cases have drawn the reader's attention to specimens that are not included in the compiled lists of H. W. Fincham's Artists and Engravers of Book Plates, or of W. Hamilton's Dated Book Plates, the two recognised authorities on these classes of book-plate. It is rare to find a book-plate both signed and dated, but Welsh examples exist in Howell Gwyn of Garth, 1742, and John Hughes of Brecon, 1745, both being engraved by Skinner of Bath.

This leads me to the question: How far were book-plates actually engraved in Wales itself? The earliest book-label printed in the Principality is, in all probability, that of "Lewis Edward, His Book, Anno Domini 1721" (not included in this collection but reproduced in Old West Wales Book Plates, "West Wales Historical Records," vol. iv.). This was most likely the work of Nicholas Thomas, printer of Carmarthen, and its date shows it to have been produced only three years after the issue of the first recorded printed book in Wales from Isaac Carter's press at Trefhedyn (Adpar). No doubt all the simple printed labels and a certain proportion of the Armorial Plates of Welsh residents were printed locally in Wales, or at least at Shrewsbury or at Chester; but the name of place or printer is very rarely given. One out of a few exceptions to this statement is the label of William Lloyd of Maes-Annod, which is described as "Printed by J. Ross, Carmarthen, 1764." This must have been in the second year of the existence of his press, but I know of no other signed book-plate by this publisher, although I recognise his characteristic work in certain unsigned specimens.

With regard to the Notes I have added to the technical descriptions of the plates, I must make some excuse for their paucity. The fact is, that Welsh heraldic bearings are more often a puzzle than a help in the process of identification. My catalogue is necessarily an alphabetical one, based on the various surnames, whereas (as every student of Welsh heraldry knows) the true Welsh coats-of-arms bear no relation to mere surnames, but are borne by the descendants or pseudo-descendants of this or that mediæval chieftain or tribal lord, who has been posthumously supplied with armorial bearings. This difficulty does not arise in identifying the families or persons of English origin in Wales, and that is the reason why the English names are better and more fully treated than those of purely Cymric descent. Again, the mere name in conjunction with a coat-of-arms is quite insufficient for identification. No one could ever really pretend to discover the true owner of such plates as "Thomas Lloyd" with the coat of Cadifor ap Dyfnwal; or "John Williams" with that of Ednyfed Vychan ; or “ William Edwards ” with that of Tewdwr Trevor. There must have been a dozen or more contemporary armigeri of those very names and entitled to those coats, and it would require some very strong evidence or intimate local knowledge indeed to name the true owner of any particular plate with such slender information to build upon. For the Welsh place-name is rarely given on a book-plate, although in ordinary speech it is seldom omitted. That I have failed to identify through faulty research in many instances is probable enough ; at the same time I have not jumped to any conclusion by guess-work. A good many of my notes are safeguarded by a preliminary query, and in some cases by two queries.

I have found the following books of special use and importance :—

H. W. Fincham, Artists and Engravers of Book Plates, 1897.

W. Hamilton, Dated Book Plates (three parts), 1894.

Burke's and Lodge's Peerage (v.d.).

Burke's Extinct Peerage, 1866.

Burke's Baronetage (v.d.).

Burke's Extinct Baronetage, 1838.

Burke's History of the Commoners, 1836-1838.

Burke's Landed Gentry (v.d., but especially the edition of 1849, with Supplement and Index).

Walford's County Families of the United Kingdom (v.d.).

Kelly's Directory of the Titled, Landed and Official Classes (v.d.).

Foster's Alumni Oxonienses (an invaluable work ; would that the University of Cambridge possessed a like record !).

Dictionary of National Biography.

Rev. R. Williams' Eminent Welshmen, 1852.

T. Nicholas, Annals of the Counties and County Families of Wales, 1872.

These are a few only of the requisite books for such a task as this. All the County Histories of Wales ; G. T. Clark's Genealogies of Glamorgan ; the whole series of the Ex Libris Society's publications (of which defunct society I was a member) ; the various pedigrees given in the Archæologia Cambrensis and the Cymmrodor ; the Transactions of the Carmarthenshire Antiq. Society ; the recently published work on North Wales Pedigrees ; the volumes of the Powysland Club ; the various works dealing with the High Sheriffs of Wales and the Border Counties ; Foster's Men at the Bar ; the publications of The West Wales Historical Society (which in vol. iv. includes my own article, "Old West Wales Book-Plates, 1698-1830," with a list of about seventy of the chief book-plates in the counties of Cardigan, Carmarthen and Pembroke) ; W. G. Shaw's Official

Introduction

List of the Knights of England, etc., etc., etc., ad infinitum.

In the matter of Heraldry, which naturally plays a very important part in this work, I have found that Papworth's Armorial worked in conjunction with Burke's Armoury sufficed for my purpose. The engravings of old Cymric armorial bearings in Enderbie's Gambria Triumphans I have also found useful, likewise some of the book-plates themselves, which in certain cases enumerate and name the various coats depicted therein (cp. Edward Abadam, Joshua Edwards, etc.).

It may be objected by the critic that a large fraction of these 1400 book-plates that I have catalogued belonged to unimportant persons, or else have no artistic value and own no personal interest. This is quite true, and I grant at once that the whole of the "Crested" book-plates are (with a few exceptions) uninteresting. Still, they are book-plates, and have belonged to Welshmen owning libraries, and therefore form an integral part of the whole mass of Welsh book-plates that we are anxious to ascertain and collect. Thus all these plates go to make up a not unimportant page of our literary history during the past two centuries and more. And besides this, they present us with a number of heraldic, genealogical and local points of interest that will prove of some service to the historical and topographical student of the future. That the book-plate owns a definite place in literary culture is proved by the considerable number of works that have been published thereon. For over two centuries it has reflected the passing phases of taste and art in Western Europe, and it affords, to myself at least, some satisfaction to show that Wales is well represented in this attractive by-path of literature.

KEY TO THE SCHEME OF ARRANGEMENT

THE book-plates are arranged under the initial letter of owner's surname: A, B, C, D, etc. Within these sections I have also arranged the plates in alphabetical order so far as has been practicable. But a strict index order has not been attempted, and the plates often follow a scheme of heraldic or family sequence. This will easily be understood by observing the long heraldic "runs," especially under such surnames as Lloyd, or Morris, or Williams.

Peers and Bishops appear under their family surnames—e.g. Lisburne, Pomfret under Vaughan, Fermor; Bishop of Bangor under Evans, etc. Place-names, when given alone, are treated similarly: thus Pengwern, Rhual, appear under Mostyn, Edwards, etc.

A few plates whose owners' surnames I have been unable to trace to my satisfaction have been placed in an "Unidentified" section at the end.

A good many abbreviations are made use of throughout the Catalogue—e.g. :

Jac.	for	Jacobean
Chip.	„	Chippendale
Arm.	„	Armorial
